11.3.1.1.1
(03-13-2018)
Background

- (1) Every IRS employee, contractor and stakeholder who has access to Federal Tax Information (FTI), Privacy Act information or Bank Secrecy Act (BSA) information is responsible to protect it from unauthorized access, use or disclosure. Likewise, every person has a responsibility to know when a disclosure is authorized. This is a basic tenant of tax administration. This IRM section provides an overview and basic introduction to disclosure with a focus on FTI.
- (2) For additional guidance on disclosures involving other sensitive information refer to the following resources:
 - Privacy Act - IRM 10.5.6, Privacy Act
 - Bank Secrecy Act - IRM 4.26, Bank Secrecy Act

11.3.1.1.2
(11-12-2021)
Authority

- (1) The primary law governing the authority for disclosure of federal tax information is 26 USC 6103, commonly referred to as IRC 6103. IRC 6103(a) establishes the confidentiality of returns and return information and prohibits any disclosure not authorized by the Code.
- (2) The laws set forth other federal disclosure legal requirements, rules, penalties and related statutes at the IRS. These laws relating to IRS disclosure or non-disclosure of tax and other sensitive information are codified at 5 USC 552 (Freedom of Information Act) and 552a (Privacy Act), IRC 6104, 6105, 6110, 7213, 7213A, 7431, and 18 USC 1905.

Note: The Open Government and other general access statutes do not override the specific protections afforded tax returns and return information by IRC 6103. For example, the Inspector General Act of 1978, as amended, the Payment Integrity Information Act (PIIA) and other access provisions of the US Code and federal agency rules or regulations may not authorize access to tax data absent specific exception as authorized by Title 26 IRC 6103.
- (3) Additional authorities pertaining to disclosure of information are found in:

Disclosure Code, Authority and Procedure (CAP)

- (1) A disclosure is the making known to any person in any manner whatever, a return or return information. IRC 6103 governs the rules for how, when, to whom and what federal tax information can or cannot be disclosed.
- (2) Before making any disclosure, every IRS employee must consider the Code Authority Procedure (CAP) process. Using a combination of the Code (usually the IRC), Authority (such as Delegation Order 11-2, found in IRM 1.2.2.11.2, and other authorizations), and Procedures (contained in the IRM and other written guidance) ensures accurate determinations prior to disclosing, inspecting or recommending the release of IRS records.
- Code: The IRC (26 USC 6103) provides the statutory basis for prohibiting or allowing disclosure of returns or return information.
 - Authority: The authority, generally established by Delegation Orders, lists the IRS officials with the authority to make the disclosure (or decision not to disclose). This includes:
 - Authorization to release and receive the information
 - Authentication of the recipient
 - Acceptance of information and any obligation placed on the recipient to protect the information disclosed
 - Access controls - i.e. "need to know"
 - Procedures: Established written procedures (in the IRM or other guidance) that explain the business process to follow for making a disclosure, and when required accounting for that disclosure. Procedures should help mitigate risks and prevent unauthorized disclosures.

- (3) Each IRS employee is affected by laws governing the confidentiality of records and information in performing their assigned duties. The CAP process is used to determine what information is confidential, who may have access to it and for what purposes, and how to account for its release. The CAP process is also used to determine what information must be made public and, if so, whether the information must be published, made generally available, or made available only upon request. Additionally, the CAP process helps to determine how to restrict the types of personal information the agency gathers and maintains about individuals, and grants certain individuals the rights to inspect and amend records about themselves.
- (4) Disclosure laws balance the competing interests of protecting the public's personal and financial privacy while maintaining open and effective administration of government.
- (5) Release of return and return information should always be limited on a need-to-know basis to the tax data that is needed (or necessary) for the specific purpose requested.
- (6) This IRM provides the instructions, guidelines, and procedures necessary to fulfill our obligations under the disclosure laws.

11.3.1.4
(03-13-2018)
Disclosure and Safeguarding of Returns and Return Information

- (1) IRC 6103(a) prohibits the disclosure of returns and return information unless authorized by Title 26. Although a disclosure may be authorized by statute, the person making the disclosure must also have the authority and follow the proper procedures, or the disclosure is not authorized. IRS employees are required, under IRC 6103, to ensure that returns and return information are protected from unauthorized disclosure and access. The IRS employee making the disclosure is responsible for ensuring the authority of the recipient to receive it. For a discussion of the rules concerning unauthorized accesses or disclosures of confidential tax information, see IRM 10.5.4, Privacy and Information Protection, Incident Management Program.

Note: IRS employees are personally responsible for verifying the identity and authority of the recipient to receive tax data prior to making any disclosure – failure to establish the recipient's authority may be negligent.

- (2) Generally, persons or agencies to whom IRS directly discloses returns or return information pursuant to IRC 6103 will be informed, in writing, of the applicable criminal and civil sanctions for unauthorized inspections or disclosures as provided by IRC 7213, IRC 7213A and IRC 7431.
- (3) IRC 6103(p)(4) contains re-disclosure and safeguarding requirements for external recipients, such as federal and state agencies, receiving returns and return information under certain provisions of IRC 6103. The responsibility for oversight of IRC 6103(p)(4) safeguarding requirements is under the Office of Safeguards, GLDS in accordance with Publication 1075, Tax Information Security Guidelines for Federal, State and Local Agencies.
- (4) Other sensitive non-tax information may also have disclosure or safeguarding requirements. See IRM 10.5.1, Privacy and Information Protection, Privacy Policy, for additional information.

- (3) Non-Federal employees, including state agency employees and contractors with access to return information, may be sued personally for damages under IRC 7431(a)(2), if they violate IRC 6103.

Note: Liability for damages accrues to the United States when the disclosure is made by any federal employee or contractor of an agency, even if disclosure is made pursuant to taxpayer consent.

- (4) Congress recently amended IRC 6103(c) and now limits disclosure and use of return information received pursuant to the taxpayer's consent and holds the recipient subject to penalties for any unauthorized access, other use, or redisclosure without the taxpayer's express permission or request. This amendment applies to disclosures made by the IRS after December 28, 2019, and any subsequent redisclosures and uses of such information disclosed by the IRS after December 28, 2019.
- (5) No liability shall arise under IRC 7431 if a court of law determines the disclosure was the result of a good faith, but erroneous, interpretation of IRC 6103, or was requested by the taxpayer.
